MEMORANDUM FOR: The General Counsel, CIA

SUBJECT : Pay for CIA Reserve Personnel for Participating in Periods of Inactive-Duty Training and Active Duty for Training

1. There are present inequities existing among CIA reservists in the matter of pay for inactive-duty training and in the opportunities for participation in periods of active duty for training with pay. Army reservists receive one (1) days basic pay for twelve (12) of the scheduled drills while reservists of the other services receive no pay. Whereas the Army and Marine Corps provide each of their Agency reservists with two (2) weeks active duty for training with full pay and allowances annually and the Air Force currently provides the same to approximately 25% of its membership, the Navy with a very few exceptions now refuses to grant active duty for training with or without pay, to CIA reservists.

2. Apparently there is a growing feeling among the services, particularly the Navy, that it is a waste of money to pay CIA reservists for periods of training out of limited reserve appropriations since they will not be available to the military upon mobilization.

3. It is considered in the best interests of the Agency that CIA military reservists be encouraged to retain a reserve status and to maintain and increase their military professional proficiency in order to better prepare themselves to fill Agency mobilization billets in the event of war or national emergency.

4. Your opinion is requested concerning the legality of CIA reimbursing a military department for the funds required if a shortage of military reserve appropriations within that department prevents CIA reservists from participating in reserve training programs with pay.
